

Dear "LegendKiller165",

With regards to that Luisitania virtual museum thread on the Brittanic: POTM subforum of Steam.

No, They are not doing the Luisitania. They never promised that and you know they didn't.

Since it is clearly You, who does not understand this, I'm going to explain it to you in a way even you (as dumb and retarded as you are) can understand.

The team at TitanicHG does NOT have the resources to take on any other projects. They are going to work on the Titanic exclusively and they will not work on anything else until their objectives there are 100% complete. Any attempt to start up another project will result in neither project ever getting done. Since completion of the Titanic project is still years away, it is quite likely that any attempt to do the Luisitania would be atleast 10-15 years away - that's if they ever do and that's not even factoring in the time required to actually complete the project.

The proper answer was for another group to take on the task of recreating the Luisitania and that's what ended up happening. Atleast until they bit off more than they could chew with trying to do a bunch of other stuff at the same time (probably thanks to people like yourself) and it has now been almost 2 years since that project last got a public update. It is uncertain whether it will ever get finished.

People like you (being 12 years old and all) have no idea what goes into making such a project. It is a huge amount of time, money and effort and there aren't many people around who have the determination, or the obsession required to take on such a massive task either.

People like me actually paid a fair bit of money into this project as investors and we paid them to do the Titanic, not use the money to work on anything else. 12 year olds like you don't have any money and therefore no skin in the game and are incapable of appreciating any of what's involved in that. Please don't act like you do, because you don't.

TitanicHG have been diligently working on the Titanic for over a decade and it is still not done and the last thing they need is 12 year olds like you messing things up by making demands for stuff that are outside the scope of their project. So don't. Go play your sucky xbox and let the adults work in peace.

Fortuantely, TitanicHG has wisely decided to focus their efforts exclusively on the Titanic (despite people like you) and that's exactly what they need to be doing.

When they finish the Titanic project. Then and only then, will there be any consideration given to doing anything else, but you're free to take up the task yourself in the meantime.

Neither you, nor anyone else are to interfere with the project objectives anymore. Do you understand? Good. Now run along.

'Nuff said.